

COMMUNITY OUTREACH STRIKE TEAMS Competition 22-14

FNESS is currently inviting applicants for the position:
Community Outreach Strike Teams

SUMMARY

There are 203 First Nation Communities in British Columbia. A significant number of our Nations are situated in the Wildland Urban Interface (WUI) where they are prone to both high and extreme risks of wildfires, as well as other all-hazard risks, such as flooding and pandemics. Both First Nations and BC Communities were heavily impacted by wildfires in 2021 and significant risk remains that has the potential to severely impact more communities in not only 2022, but in future years to come. There is an immediate need to implement measures to reduce risk to community members, prevent loss of residential structures, and collect information necessary to support current recovery and future wildfire mitigation initiatives.

OPPORTUNITY

Opportunity exists to reduce community risk, as well as increase efficiencies in all recovery initiatives for impacted communities. This can be achieved with the establishment of Community Outreach Strike Teams. These Strike Teams can be deployed to communities who are at imminent risk to wildfire and implement actions that will reduce potential impacts to residential structures, as well as support recovery initiatives for members of communities that have been impacted by wildfires.

STRIKE TEAM ACTIVATION

The intent is for these trained Strike Teams to be deployed once an Emergency Operation Centre (EOC) has been activated for the community and have the support of Chief and Council to work closely with the Structure Protection Specialists and Local Fire Departments.
